OUR HISTORY

Dating back to 1585, The Eagle at Weeton is one of Fylde's oldest pubs. Originally part of Lord Derby's estate, its name comes from the family crest.

The inn's mounting steps, dated 1755, remain at the front, while inside you'll find 15th-century brass halberds and a sword discovered behind the pub. Although a fire destroyed the original thatched roof in the 1960s, one of the original beams still stands today.

Local legend says that Oliver Cromwell stayed at The Eagle and sealed tunnels running from the cellar to Singleton Church during the Civil War. From 17th-century gangs and ghostly tales to generations of soldiers training at Weeton Barracks, The Eagle has witnessed centuries of history.
